

Activity diagrams are another type of behavior diagram in UML that show the flow of activities or actions that occur within a system or process. An activity diagram is similar to a flowchart in that it represents the steps or activities that occur, but with the added advantage of being able to model parallel and concurrent activities.

